Ok. Thanks. Did any of the verbal outbreaks amount to a criminal threat?

Chief, update on the TMU review of the postings and disruptions during last nights Mayoral town hall. Chief Marino has already worked on increased presence to support USC today during the Mayoral candidate town hall.

I reached out to CM Deleon today but have not heard back as of yet.

Good afternoon, everyone.

Detective Cruz has been in contact with the Councilmember's Chief of Staff, and if the Councilmember would like a crime report, we will complete one, but at this time, we do not know who put up the signs. Det. Cruz also went through all the social media connected to the two groups in question (J-Town and Street Watch LA now), and there are no threats or implied threats on their sites and no clear evidence of planned escalation. However, both groups are loosely connected to the People's City Council and other homeless advocacy groups that like to speak out and disrupt meetings. Hence, the potential for escalation due to poorly modulated emotions is possible. That being said, security at all speaking events is vital and is being utilized by the Councilmember. TMU will continue to maintain contact with the Councilmember and his staff and monitor for escalation.

Kind regards,

Traci

Good morning. Thank you for the info and TMUs review. While I don't see a direct threat to the CM on the stickers, i do appreciate a close review of the language used in the audience for potential 422.

Keep update as develops.

Chief received a call from CM DeLeon this evening regarding the Mayoral debate that took place at Temple Beth Hillel in OVB. The group J Town as well as Street Watch LA showed up and disrupted the event. CM DeLeon advised that the group on several occasions yelled out "Kevin you will get yours" also the same group is believed to have posted the below death posters within street signs at the recent area of the Plaza clean up.

LAPD was present at the debate but the disruptive group was ultimately escorted out by Temple security. No threats can be heard on the videos the CM sent to me.

Kris Pitcher will have TMU take a look at video as well as the postings. The debate was live streamed so there will be many videos available.

I checked in with Rob Marino and he is aware of the planned USC debate tomorrow. Harry was also updated on the call today from CM DeLeon.
